Cyndi L. Trombley (Author) and Linda E. Kleinert (Illustrator) both of Douglassville, P.a. are available for presentations at schools, daycare centers and libraries. They offer a book reading, an informative lesson in opposites and the chance for the child to become an Illustrator in the classroom.

According to Abbey not only introduces the reader to the idea of opposites, but it teaches children about story telling with a poetic voice. The moral of the story is the time spent with a child – a wonderful lesson for both adults and children alike.

According to Abbey also offers the reader the challenge to find the letter A in each illustration. This alone encourages interaction between a parent and a child or a teacher and a student. The children find themselves studying the illustrations instead of just passing them by...

An afternoon or morning spent with an Author and Illustrator can open the door to a whole new world for a child –
